Brownstone Technology Solutions Launches Twitter Page
Twitter page focuses on new point-of-sale software, BPOS

(Redondo Beach, CA—March 3, 2010...) Brownstone Technology Solutions (BTS), a premier provider of point-of-sale systems, today announced the launch of its new Twitter page to increase its accessibility to current clients. BTS plans to utilize this social media strategy to distribute news about its new point-of-sale software, BPOS, to provide support and advice to its current customers, and to establish a brand identity for BPOS.

President Diana Meraz says, “We are extremely excited for our software launch, and we feel that Twitter is an excellent platform to relay information regarding the software, its benefits and features, to our current clients. Our Twitter page will make it easy for people to access information, as well as promote conversations between BTS and its customers including customer feedback, comments, and questions.”

The Twitter page can be found at: <http://twitter.com/BrownstoneBPOS>. Tweets will be sent out daily, and “followers” will be able to gain access to cutting-edge information about the new software. Current customers will also be able to obtain information about special deals and promotions regarding the new software.
